—MINIMUM WAGE

City copes with rising wages, prices

By Kristin Summers
 University Editor

Though the minimum wage increase has only been official for a week and half, it has already started its rippling effect.

Bobby Thompson, owner of Mr. Goodcents, said the local restaurant raised its prices the beginning of the year because of minimum wage. He said restaurants have the choice to either raise prices or cut staff and that the increase isn't helping small businesses.

Other restaurants have raised their prices as well. The Mandarin and Happy Garden have both raised their prices since the year began.

Sharon Ye, manager of Happy Garden, said prices have gone up because of minimum wage this month. However, the increase isn't the only reason why The Mandarin's prices have increased, said Shuwen Ye, owner of both. Distributors pricing also plays a role.

"Everything went up, it's not just us," Shuwen said.

Though some restaurants said their prices increase at the beginning of the year due to minimum wage, others will not comment on the correlation between the two.

Local restaurants are not the only busi-

States increase minimum wage

Even though it's affecting local businesses, the increase is not affecting Maryville city jobs, City Manager Mike Rietz said. Sean Burge, the executive director of Nod-nesses feeling the brunt of the increase so far. The Maryville Community Center raised their memberships fees, Megan Crawford said, an employee at the center.

The center put up a sign on their door to let patrons know of the membership increase. However, there are still complaints about the price, Crawford said.

away County Economic Development, said since the consumer price index went up as well as minimum wage, prices in businesses will continue to rise with minimum wage.

"It affects every county the same," Burge said.

Burge wonders how some families live off minimum wage and questions if people living off minimum wage could have the money to own a house or a car.

He also said the government has to do something because the increase isn't keeping with inflation.

"The fact that the minimum wage legislation is tied to the consumer price index, we have a situation where both prices and wages will continue to increase within the state in the in the short term," Burge said.

Room and board on the rise

By Lindsay Jacobs
 Asst. Features Editor

It's happened before and it's going to happen again.

Northwest room and board rates have been on the rise for the past several years, and this year is no different. A 7 percent increase will go in to effect for the fall 2007 trimester.

The Board of Regents approved the increase at their December 15 meeting.

Factors causing the rise include inflation, the minimum wage increase, the increase in benefits and salaries of the dining staff and the increase will help pay for the debt of residential hall projects.

Ray Courter, vice president of finance and support services, said the process approving the increase began with the Auxiliary Budget Team who had meetings to discuss the issues.

From there they made a recommendation on what needed to be changed. The recommendation was handed out and discussed with the Cabinet, Student Senate and the Residence Hall Association.

Welfare, economy top initiatives

Students, citizens show Iraq concern in light of Congressional control

By Dominic Genetti
 Senior Reporter

Democratic leaders are entering their new reign of leadership with several initiatives and issues impacting the U.S. economy and welfare.

While minimum wage, homeland security, Social Security and the possible reinstatement of a military draft are some of the large issues, big talk continues to surround the war in Iraq and the supply of American soldiers.

Not only is this a concern among politicians in Washington, D.C., but it is also a concern of local residents and students. The concern was so large for some the vote for Democratic seemed to be a must.

Northwest sophomore Barry Grass said there just needs to be change.

"I voted for Democrats because I'm not a fan of current economic policy the Republican Party has," Grass said. "They pitched the idea to the voter they could do something about the problems voters saw and they need to come through with those promises."

Grass said progress should be a concern as well.

"If they [Democrats] can't make any progress on the issues the voters care about, then I don't even know what that's going to say for the next round of elections in '08," Grass said. "If this Democratic controlled Congress can't get what the voters want, I'm not sure who they're going to vote for."

However, Northwest senior Katie Cudzilo didn't see much impact in the new developments on Capitol Hill.

"I can't imagine it would be that significant," Cudzilo said. "We only see the media side anyway, so maybe we don't need a change."

Others like Dave Logsdon, an Andrew County resident, believe the country's leadership needed some control.

New principal quest in progress

School Board decides not to renew contract

By Andrea James
 Chief Reporter

Maryville High School begins its search for a new principal.

The Maryville School Board decided in an executive session to not renew Principal Ron Landherr's contract for the fall of 2007-'08 school year.

The decision resulted from the district's reevaluation process, Superintendent Vickie Miller said. Miller declined to comment further.

Ron Landherr
 Maryville High Principal

"The district will not discuss individual personnel," Miller said.

Landherr was unavailable for comment.

Landherr has been the principal at Maryville High School for 15 years. During his tenure he has implemented many programs intended to increase communication between the school and its students.

"Ron Landherr deals with pretty much everything that has to do with the school," Miller said.

The Youth Safety Task Force formed last year to increase safety in the high school, according to Maryville.k12.mo.us. This program includes a school resource officer, the chief of public safety, Maryville city manager and many others.

It created rules to make the school a safe environment for the students.

Some of the rules include all doors except the main and west entrances should remain locked, classroom doors should also be locked during class hours, bags and any kind of jackets or coats are to be left in lockers during the school day and cars need to be registered with the high school office and cannot be moved during the day.

The Parent Advisory Team was also established during Landherr's employment at Maryville High School.

This program collects information from the parents, students,

OUR VIEW

Make resolutions count this year

Resolutions can be as pointless as Kevin Federline's singing career. They may seem like a good idea, but in the end it may be best to just forget they even exist.

Some of us at the Missourian are resolving not to resolve things we'll never accomplish in 2007. Instead of setting outlandish expectations for ourselves of losing 75 pounds or quitting smoking cold turkey, we are going to merely resolve to be happy with what we have and are—something we urge each of you to do.

Now, don't get us wrong, the right resolution with adequate determination is admirable, attainable even. Resolving to send your loved ones more letters or donate to your favorite charity frequently are goals to be commended. But it is time to stop this tomfoolery of trying to magically transform into something you're never going to be because the ball dropped on New Year's.

Life isn't a fairy tale and you're not going to magically transform like Cinderella at the stroke of midnight, so you need to get this notion out of your minds.

Maybe an even more important notion to ponder is why some of us want a fresh start. Save the fact you may have had something traumatic happen to you the previous year, 2006 and all previous years happened for a reason and should be periods of time you are proud of and want to remember.

We spend so much of our time trying to change who we are. We think it's great if you want to lose a few pounds or quit smoking, but why wait for the beginning of the year, put so much anticipation on the resolution and end up failing? If you do insist on setting resolutions this year, the University of Maryland Medical Center Web site has some tips for keeping them—even if for a few weeks longer this year.

"Focus on realistic goals with measurable results," said Jill Rach-Beisel, M.D., director of community psychiatry at the University of Maryland Medical Center and an associate professor of psychiatry at the University of Maryland School of Medicine. "You need to break things down into small steps that you can manage."

The medical center also suggests sharing your resolutions with others, avoiding perfectionist thinking and setting goals that truly have meaning to your life.

Instead of trying to lose 75 pounds, try to lose a pound every week. We know Americans demand instant gratification when it comes to things like weight loss and resolutions, but what's the point of aiming to lose an immense amount of weight only to not lose anything at all or worse, gaining it all back because you didn't set an attainable goal and gave up.

All in all, life isn't that bad. Be thankful for what you have and if you really only have five vanity pounds to lose, don't beat yourself up over it. Life really is about wanting what you have.

Even better yet, maybe resolve not to resolve this year, and work on being a better person or being thankful all year long.

A MINUTE WITH MIKE

The 94th General Session convened on Wednesday, Jan. 3 with much pomp and circumstance. I was both humbled and excited as I was sworn in as Fourth District Representative and became a part of the body that will strive to move our state forward and make it a better place for our citizens. Listening to the speeches given by the House leaders reiterating past accomplishments and outlining their goals for the coming year, I was reminded of the daunting task ahead and the responsibility entrusted to me by the people of northwest Missouri.

I thank you for giving me this opportunity. I especially appreciate my wonderful family, friends and supporters who made the trip to Jefferson City to share in an unforgettable week. In a whirlwind of activities, emotions, and new experiences, there is a realization of how much is to be learned. I will strive to make this new journey fruitful and productive for the people that I am so proud to represent.

As previously promised, I filed a bill on my first official day in office relating to school safety to give our schools the ability to create a safer atmosphere for our children. It deals primarily with the identification of and the sharing of information about potentially violent students and situations, with disaster preparedness—making prevention a priority for school safety and with better coordination of social services with the schools. This fits very well with what was listed as one of the priority issues to be dealt with in this session. We must provide our teachers the protection they need to maintain a disciplined classroom and help them provide a safe environment conducive to learning. The well-being of our children and the educational opportunities provided will always be of utmost importance to me.

As we begin an exciting new adventure I would like to wish you all a very Prosperous and Happy New Year. You may reach me at my Capitol number (573) 751-9465, by e-mail mike.thomson@house.mo.gov or by mail at Room 406A State Capitol Building, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101.

Campus housing costs rise once more

While most of us were spending time with family, working or "Facebooking" relentlessly over our winter break, Northwest announced a housing rate hike for the 2007-2008 school year.

Jessica Schmidt
Managing Editor

Luckily for me, I've been exempt from on-campus housing for two years now.

I was "lucky" enough to experience the joys of living in the high rises my freshmen year and in Roberts Hall my sophomore year.

But don't read my sarcasm as all bad—on-campus living has its perks.

For example, I enjoyed getting up five minutes before class, throwing on a hoodie and a whole 100 feet from my dorm to Wells Hall every weekday. I also enjoyed having an actual meal plan, getting coffee every morning and not having to worry about the simple inconveniences like paying a water, electric or propane bill every month. I spent a lot less money on gas for my car, and I never had a horrible roommate(s) experience like some.

Having said that, I must say that

I'm not for sure why anyone would want to stay on campus outside of the required freshmen year, especially after this latest rate hike.

I live seven miles outside of Maryville and I love it. Last year I lived in a nice apartment complex just off of North Sixteenth Street and paid close to $300 in rent and utilities. This year I live in a much nicer, bigger house in the country and pay the same amount.

To live in the high rises next fall incoming freshmen will pay $200 more per semester. The Tower Suites will cost $158 more, and the "modified suites" (i.e. Roberts) will pay $149 more.

Those of you in the apartments will only pay $40 more, but considering you now pay $426 plus utilities—I think you may have to have some serious reasons to live there in the first place. You will be paying close to $500 per month to live in an apartment with up to five others and have bedrooms with no closets—only wardrobes.

Maybe on-campus living suits you the best. You may like the campus atmosphere or you may not have a vehicle to get around in.

But for those of you who have the option of living on or off campus next year my piece of advice is to look around first. I'm sure some Maryville landlords will up their prices to accommodate for the minimum wage increase and for higher water and gas prices—but some are bound to be more reasonable than the upcoming on-campus rates.

Explosion still a source for inspiration

As a collegiate journalist approaching the halfway point of my career, I've begun to look for opportunities to get my feet wet in the so-called "real world" of journalism.

Evan Young
Copy Editor

Over our holiday break, I succeeded in obtaining an internship (my first) at my hometown newspaper this summer. A small start, but after talking with staff members, along with the paper's top editors, I believe it could lead to bigger and better things.

However, no matter how memorable an experience this and other internships offer me, it won't be enough for me to brush aside the lessons I learned during my first week working for the Missourian, one year ago, where the "real world" of journalism came at us full force.

Our first issue of 2006 was going to be a pretty standard one, as I recall. There wasn't anything too big, happening on campus, and the city seemed pretty quiet as well.

Then Wednesday night rolled around. I don't think any of us in the newsroom that evening actually felt the Hall house explosion on South Alco Avenue, unlike other students and Maryville residents. But I think I speak for everyone when I say we all felt the subsequent intensity and adrenaline rush of a new staff under pressure.

Facing deadline, we had to handle the explosion with utmost professionalism. We sent out two of our best writers, Dennis Sharkey and Sean Comer, to cover the blaze and the destruction. Mike Dye, our photography editor, hurried on foot to the scene from a game at Bearcat Arena to take the jaw-dropping photographs that would add a stunning visual element to our coverage.

Back in the newsroom, we kept our ears glued to the police scanner for any new developments and fielded frantic phone calls from Laura Widmer, our adviser, and South Alco resident. Meanwhile, Editor in Chief Stephanie Stangl and Design Editor Kristine Hotop began to tear apart a nearly completed A1 package to create the powerful "Fatal Explosion" cover that would jump out at readers from newsstands the next day.

My role that evening was, by comparison to my colleagues, pretty minimal. I offered my help to whoever needed it, but at the time, as someone new to the whole process, I could honestly do little more than that.

However, there was one thing I did do. I observed. And what I observed that Jan. 11 is the reason why I'm still a part of this organization, and for that matter, a student of this industry.

Journalists are criticized on many levels. Some say we're too biased, others complain we're too careless and inaccurate. Others accuse us of being downright malicious, morbid and insensitive.

I'm sure they have their reasons, but it's hard for me to take their grievances too seriously after watching the Missourian staff that night. I've never seen such dedication and hard, hard work. I knew I made a right choice when I chose to pursue mass communication at Northwest, but what I saw a year ago, and in the months since, made me proud of that decision, plain and simple.

Our jobs are fun and stressful, valuable and mind numbing. But through it all I've realized that this is what journalism is all about. It's about producing your best, no matter what you have to do or when you have to do it. It's about grabbing some things by the horns, while leaving other, perhaps more desirable things, behind.

Whether I remain in the newspaper business after college is still up in the air, but whatever job I take, I know I'll be sure to take with me the things I learned that very first deadline. From the moment I saw the final product of that long night, I told myself that I would always bring my best to every organization with which I work, and constantly shoot for the unwavering dedication of Jan. 11.

Reverend Monsignor Donald S. Miller, Conception, Mo., died

Thursday, Dec. 14, 2006 at Heartland Regional Medical Center, St. Joseph.

Monsignor Miller was born in Parnell June 16, 1916 to Wyatt W. Miller and Esther Klaas Miller. His mother died in 1918 leaving two young sons, Donald and his brother, Wyatt Joseph. Their father and grandmother, Louisa Klaas, raised the boys. Donald attended public school in Parnell and then the Catholic school in Conception Junction, Mo. He attended the high school and college at Conception Abbey, and studied theology at Kenrick Seminary in St. Louis.

He was in his 65th year of priesthood. There were two special moments of his final year. In June he celebrated his birthday with many friends and family. In October he learned that he had received Pontifical Honors, being named a Chaplain to His Holiness, Pope Benedict XVI, receiving the title "Monsignor."

Monsignor Donald Miller was ordained a priest at St. Joseph Cathedral on May 30, 1942 by Bishop Charles LeBlond. Father was active in parishes for over 60 years until 2003, when he retired and moved to the Infirmary at Conception Abbey.

Covering a span of 30 years, he served in the Diocese of St. Joseph and then the Diocese of Kansas City-St. Joseph, as pastor at Sacred Heart Parish, Hamilton, Mo., St. John LaLande, Blue Springs, the mission of St. George in Odessa, St. Louis Parish, Kansas City and St. Mark Parish, Independence. He started the parish school at St. John and built the first church at St. George.

After he retired from active pastoral work, he spent the next 15 years as Senior Priest in Service first at St. Patrick Parish in Kansas City and then 12 years at St. Gregory Barbarigo Parish in Maryville.

In all of these parishes he promoted the Legion of Mary. In his early years, he and other young priests did street preaching in various towns in northwest Missouri. At other times he served on the marriage tribunal as secretary, promoted activities for youth, and in Maryville wrote monthly articles on religious topics for the Maryville Daily Forum.

He is survived by his wife, Patricia Bixler of the home in Maryville, two sons: Stephen Michael and wife, Julie Bixler, Lees Summit, Mo., Timothy Brien and wife, Julie Bixler, Mandeville, La., Grandson, Chad Bixler, Lee's Summit, Mo., granddaughter, Elizabeth and husband, Michael Carr, Washington, D.C., and brother, Gordon and wife, Dorothea Bixler of Boise, Idaho.

Funeral Services will be held at 1 p.m. Wednesday at Price Funeral Home Chapel, Maryville, with a visitation to be held prior to the service, from noon to 1 p.m.

Burial, with full military honors, will be at Nodaway Memorial Gardens Maryville.

Memorials may be sent to George W. Barratt Scholarship Fund, care of Northwest Foundation, 800 University Drive, Maryville, Mo. 64468.

HOME: Housing prices to increase for fall 2007 trimester

"We're trying to present what will be the fairest option," Courter said. "And we're answering questions and taking feedback."

Since a majority was in agreement with it, Courter said they put a packet together to be sent to the Board of Regents in advance before the meetings so they could think about it prior to the meeting.

"We always have to be six, eight months ahead," Courter said. Courter said in the market place food prices are rising along with prices of products. Some salaries are also going up.

"We make these estimates given the best information we have available, try to make the best informed judgment of what costs will be later on," Courter said.

In comparison with other Missouri Institutions, Northwest falls in the middle group for the 2006-07 school year. Courter said he doesn't know where the University will fall for next year, but he predicts to be in the middle group again. Northwest was probably the first on the list to raise rates for next year, he said.

"We've been sort of in the middle, and that's been true for many many years," Courter said. "I think the trend of the past will probably hold true again for next year."

Matt Baker, director of Residential Life, said he doesn't think the rate increase will hinder contract re-signing.

"Every year we have to increase the housing rates about the same percentage, ranging from 5 to 8 percent depending on the factors of the year," Baker said. "Our numbers have been relatively the same through the last five years for room re-sign."

Baker said he thinks the pricing isn't outrageous, but it's reasonable to get students through college in an efficient manner.

Rates for the next fall are set early so Residential Life is better prepared to answer students' questions when they sign up for next year's housing. Admissions staff can answer incoming students' questions and the Financial Aid staff will be better prepared to assemble award packages.

Provost Kichoon Yang predicts the increase will not have an effect on students choosing to stay on campus because of the variety of housing the University offers to students.

The increases are causing some students to reconsider their plans for housing next year.

Freshman Missy Kaplinger said she plans to stay on campus next year even though the rates are increasing, but she said she will choose cheaper campus housing.

She said she is choosing to stay because of her student loan, and the lap top and meal plans that are offered even though she isn't pleased about the rate increases.

"It's kind of upsetting," Kaplinger said. Freshmen Natalie Swope and Lisa Porter said the increase may affect their decision to renew their housing contracts for next year depending on the scholarships and financial aid they receive.

"It's hard enough to pay for college now as it is, let alone with the increases," Swopes said.

The rates that are set for next fall will not be changed between now and then, Courter said.

A woman will lead congress for the first time in the history of the United States. Nancy Pelosi, a native of San Francisco and a representative of California, will serve as the Speaker of the House.

Northwest graduate assistant Amanda Francis said America is behind in having a woman leader and it was bound to happen.

O agreed. "Probably a little late, but I think it's good that it happened," Logsdon said. "She's a great lady."

Grass called Pelosi's appointing progressive. "Hopefully it opens a way that there won't be an issue when a woman is running for vice president or president," Grass said.

NORTHWEST GUARD Meghan Brue, coming out of a medical redshirt season, is being counted on as a leader both on and off the court. Brue is now a starter for the 'Cats after a back injury kept her away from basketball for a year.

By Cali Arnold
Community Sports Editor

Who would have guessed being forced to take a year off would have made such a difference?

Probably not even Meghan Brue herself.

After starting the first 11 games of her Northwest career, to hardly playing, to being forced to medical redshirt her second season, Northwest women's basketball sophomore Brue is now a major leader on a team looking to make an impact on the MIAA conference.

A quick beginning

Brue has been a winner from the beginning. A 2004 graduate of Underwood (Iowa) High School, Brue's team won back-to-back class 2-A state championships. Brue was at the helm as point guard, not only making the class 2-A all-tournament team, but also being named the class 2-A Player of the Year. Other honors, such as being a member of the all-western Iowa team, first team all-state, first team all-district and first team all-conference were all bestowed upon her.

South Dakota and the University of Northern Iowa recruited her, but Brue decided to make a phone call to Northwest coach Gene Steinmeyer during her senior season.

Brue said she made the call, although she was not heavily recruited by Northwest, because she liked the size of the school and the distance from her hometown.

"I came on a visit, liked it, they liked me, and I decided to come here," Brue said.

Like her they did, and Brue came out quickly as a starting forward for the Bearcats in her first season of play.

However, Division II basketball is a lot different than high school. The nerves were something she decided to use for her instead of against.

"I'd rather play with expectations than no expectations, for sure," Brue said.

Having the chance to practice against then-teammate Ashley Poptanycz was a great help, according to Brue, to make the transition from playing a guard position to a forward. Poptanycz used her experience to teach rebounding and playing strong and confident basketball to her younger teammate.

BOUNCING BACK

Peterson determined to have an injury-free season

By Brett Barger
University Sports Editor

Junior forward Andy Peterson says he's never had a good year at Northwest.

Two out of Peterson's first three years have been injury-plagued. During his injury-free sophomore season, Peterson, dealing with lingering pain from a previous knee injury, started only eight games.

With two injuries in the first 13 games of the season, Peterson is undoubtedly cautious. After all, Peterson has started in nine of the team's first 13 games and is third in scoring and second in steals.

"Andy brings quite a bit to the table," Northwest coach Steve Tappmeyer said.

Peterson missed four games after spraining his medial collateral ligament in a win over Graceland on Nov. 21. Against Fort Hays State, Northwest's second conference game, Peterson suffered a concussion after taking a shoulder to the head but did not miss any time.

"It's been a grind these last three years, just staying healthy," Peterson said.

After graduating from Class 1 Grundy County, Peterson took part in the Lions All-Star Game, held at Bearcat Arena, which featured standout athletes from around the area. After the game, then Northwest assistant coach Darren Vordebruege approached Peterson about joining the Bearcats, an offer that he didn't take long to accept.

Before the all-star game, Peterson turned down an offer from Culver-Stockton College in Canton, Mo., and was already enrolled at the University of Missouri-Columbia when he was offered a scholarship to Northwest.

"We had to go through and cancel all of this stuff at Mizzou. It was late," Peterson said. "Mom and Dad still get letters addressed to the parents of Andy Peterson."

Peterson entered Northwest as a redshirt. While a red-shirt learns the system and practices, Peterson had to dedicate himself to a severe ankle sprain, which kept him out for two months.

Things got worse during his freshman year. Half-way through the conference season, Peterson suffered a torn anterior cruciate ligament in his right knee.

Intense rehab over the summer with help from the athletic training staff at Northwest helped Peterson prepare for a healthy sophomore season. Peterson finished the 2005-06 season, averaging 7.1 points per game.

Peterson said the first month of the season was the most difficult for him because his knee started to flare up and lingering thoughts of another injury loomed on his mind.

"The whole first year back from the ACL, I was favoring it. Maybe not consciously, but subconsciously, my body was favoring it. At times, it was hard."

Through the whole thing, when times got tough, Peterson said he appreciated what Kelly Quinlin, assistant athletic trainer, and David "DC" Colt, head athletic trainer, did to bring him back to the hardwood. Peterson also said his family, teammates and more importantly, his faith kept him positive.

"Everything happens for a reason and I believe that," Peterson said.

Through it all, Tappmeyer said Peterson brings leadership to the team on and off the court.

"Andy is someone who gives us really good leadership. He's got a maturity about him," Tappmeyer said. "Even when he's not playing good, he's not hanging his head or playing frustrated."

The potential of another injury doesn't keep Peterson from playing physical, especially as conference season begins to heat up.

"In this league, if you're not playing physical, you're just going to get burnt," Peterson said. "If you're not playing physical, you're not going to play."

Track rebounds from long layoff

After having more than a month break, the Northwest men and women's indoor track and field coaches are ready to get back to action.

However, the coaches don't know if their teams are ready.

Both teams travel to Lincoln, Neb., Friday and Saturday. Men's coach, Richard Alsop, said he doesn't know how his team will perform.

"We send home suggested workouts, but we have no control whether they do it or not," Alsop said. "The average person, when confronted with eating and watching TV, doesn't do much."

"I don't have an indication on where they are right now, but I'm not holding my breath on them being in shape."

Alsop's team recorded seven top three finishes at the Iowa State Indoor Holiday Classic Dec. 8. Courtland Ingram and Ben McKim each notched second-place finishes in the pole vault and shot put, respectively.

That finish, accompanied with last season's second-place conference finish, has the Bearcats eyeing a first-place conference trophy.

Several members of the Northwest football team earned postseason honors after finishing 14-1 this year. The Bearcats capped off the season in the national title game, losing to Grand Valley St., 17-14.

Seven players earned D2Football.com All-American mention, while 10 players landed on Don Hansen's All-Southwest Region team.

Kyle Kaiser, Thomas Smith and Ben Harnes each reached first team All-American, along with first team All-Southwest Region.

Xavier Onon and Reid Kirby were named to the All-American second team. Kirby notched first team All-Southwest Region, while Onon garnered second team.

Ryan Waters and Mike Peterson each notched honorable mention All-American. Both landed first team All-Southwest Region.

All-Southwest Region also named Diezas Calbert and Kendall Wright to the first team, and Joe Holtzclaw to the third team.

Men off to 4-0 conference start

By Brett Barger
University Sports Editor

Last time the Northwest men's basketball team opened the conference season 4-0, the Bearcats advanced to the Elite Eight.

There is more work to be done, according to coach Steve Tappmeyer.

"It's a process. We just don't know what level we can take this team to," Tappmeyer said.

With a team that boasts four new starters, one thing that has been a pleasant surprise is the team's ability to come from behind in each of their four conference games. Their shining moment came against defending conference champion Southwest Baptist. After trailing by as much as 16, 11-2 Northwest came back for an 81-80 victory on Dec. 9.

"We haven't shown much quit...that's what I like," Tappmeyer said.

Emerging as one of the best in the MIAA is forward Hunter Henry. Henry is the only MIAA player that ranks in the top 10 in scoring (17.6), rebounding (7.2) and field goal percentage (.583). Henry has shown versatility, whether it be in the post or from downtown. In the loss to Midwestern State, Henry's nine points in the last two minutes tied the game. Northwest would fall 72-70 on a last second shot.

"It's hard to imagine going out there and competing at a high level without him (Henry) in there," Tappmeyer said.

While Henry has settled in as an elite player, players like guards Lance Sullivan and John Hawkins are contributing after spending the beginning of the season on the bench. Saturday, Hawkins poured in a career high 14 points, including three treys to help Northwest.

"When I get open shots, my teammates create it for me. I just try and knock it down," Hawkins said after the 69-58 win over the Ichabods.

During the last two games, Sullivan's late three pointers helped Northwest pull away from Missouri Western and Washburn. This season, Sullivan is second on the team in scoring with 11.2 points per game.

"My teammates have the confidence in me, so I was pretty much going to have to have the confidence in myself," Sullivan said after the win over Western.

Tough defense has been the key during Tappmeyer's tenure, but is more prevalent this season. Through the first 13 games, Northwest remains top in the MIAA in scoring defense, field goal percentage and steals.

"You have to get emotionally and physically ready twice a week for a game that's going to take your best effort, or you get beat," Tappmeyer said.

For the most part, injuries haven't plagued Northwest. Andy Peterson missed some time after spraining his MCL in a win over Graceland on Nov. 21. In the Midwestern State loss, Henry sprained his ankle and has since recovered.

"It's important for us to have everyone healthy. Anything that disrupts the chemistry we've got going right now can really be a big blow to this team," Tappmeyer said.

After Northwest hosts Pittsburg State Saturday and Truman State Wednesday, the road will challenge the Bearcats. Northwest takes on No. 3 Central Missouri and then turns around to play No. 8 Emporia State.

"We've got to be able to go to other people's courts and our court and take care of business," point guard Reggie Robinson said.

Getting it together

By Cali Arnold
Community Sports Editor

The Northwest women's basketball team is finding out what the MIAA conference is all about.

After starting the season with a 7-2 record, the Bearcats began conference play Dec. 9 with an overtime win on the road against then-undefeated Southwest Baptist. However, after a week of finals and during a long holiday break, the team suffered some setbacks.

A disappointing 75-48 loss at South Dakota Dec. 20 meant another nonconference defeat, but to a team with only one loss at the time. Ten days later, a 70-62 road win against MIAA opponent Fort Hays State was followed closely by a heartbreaking 72-69 loss to then-undefeated Missouri Western. A 71-57 loss to Washburn finished off the break for the 'Cats.

"The biggest thing is the quality of teams we've played up to this point," Northwest coach Gene Steinmeyer said. "It's been one challenge after another."

The 'Cats currently sit at 9-4 on the season and are tied for fifth in the MIAA with a 2-2 record.

Guard Meghan Brue said the COACH GENE Steinmeyer instructs the women's basketball team on Tuesday afternoon during practice held in the Martindale Gym.

loss at South Dakota was the end to a "weird" game.

"I don't even know what to say about it," Brue said. "We just didn't play well and we got slaughtered."

However, winning the first two conference road games of the year is a plus for the team. With five more road games, not counting Wednesday night's game at Missouri Southern (outcome not available at press time), winning is crucial to go along with confidence in a heartbeat," Steinmeyer said. "Within a half of basketball you can go from a team who thinks they're 10 feet tall and bulletproof to one who doesn't know if they'll ever get another win, and that's what basketball's all about. Right now we have to be at the latter instead of the former. So we've just got to climb out of the hole and get some confidence."

Eight more home conference contests.

Steinmeyer said the home loss to Washburn might have been the toughest the team faced over break. Between the loss and Wednesday's game at Missouri Southern, however, Northwest did not let up.

To get ready for the rest of MIAA play, Brue said the team had two-a-day practices before school started Monday, including early morning shoots to get over the scoring slump it is currently in.

Brue scored 18, 31 and 16 points against Fort Hays State, Missouri Western and Washburn, respectively, to be the bright spot offensively for the 'Cats. Steinmeyer said the play of the women of the team is another plus for his team to balance out the sluggish offense.

Northwest will be at home Saturday for a 1:30 p.m. matchup against Pittsburg State and will host Truman State at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The mediocrity play over the break isn't going to stop the 'Cats from playing to the rest of the season with high hopes.

"Basketball's such a funny game. You can gain confidence and lose your confidence in a heartbeat," Steinmeyer said. "Within a half of basketball you can go from a team who thinks they're 10 feet tall and bulletproof to one who doesn't know if they'll ever get another win, and that's what basketball's all about. TRACK: 'Cats build from earlier meet; venture to Lincoln

Co-captain John Bullock said experience, meshed with new talent, could make for an exciting season.

"The team is much stronger than last year," Bullock said. "If we can do a little better, we can compete for a conference championship."

Along with Bullock at the 400, co-captains Matt Pohnren and Bayo Adio look to add experience to this year's indoor team. Alsup said Adio should compete well in the high jump and triple jump, while Pohnren started the year with a third-place finish in the 3,000 at the Holiday Classic.

During last season's trip to Lincoln, Pohnren also notched a fourth-place finish in the 3,000. Senior co-captain Eric Isley fared well at Lincoln last year with a first place finish in the 800.

"From a team standpoint, expectations are focused on a conference championship," Alsup said. "We got second last year in indoor, but by the end of the meet, it wasn't that close."

"Certainly with this group it is reasonable to expect we will give the top teams a run for their money."

Young Bearcats
Along with the men's team, the women must adjust to a long layoff without much experience.

The Bearcats feature 10 upperclassmen with only two seniors. Kim Homan and Stacey Loemker are the loner seniors on a roster of 41. Women's coach, Scott Lorek, said leadership must come from underclassmen.

"All sophomores need to display leadership," Lorek said. "They have been doing it all fall and people have been dependent on them. They need to be a good group."

Sophomore Johanna Avilez currently holds the school record in the 60-meter hurdles and finished sixth at December's Iowa State Holiday Classic.

Cassie Sherlock garnered the women's best finish in Ames by placing second in the 800.

Lorek expects his team to do well this season after getting back into meet action Friday.

"The first meet back, we don't expect great things," Lorek said. "You get used to not competing, so you have to make adjustments mentally and physically."

Lorek said adjusting to the indoor track may also be difficult for a young team.

"It is a big adjustment for freshmen running indoors," Lorek said about his 18 freshmen. "Sometimes that adjustment doesn't happen until the sophomore year."

Along with Sherlock's second place finish, four other Bearcats finished fourth at the Iowa State Holiday Classic. Brandi Honeywell notched fourth in the long jump, while Emily Churchman's triple jump landed her fourth place.

"In the past, I had not performed well indoors, but the first meet went great," Honeywell said. "Now that I know the ropes I am more confident indoors."

Loemker and Hannah Henry notched fourth-place finishes in the weight throw and the 60-meter hurdles, respectively.

Although Karah Spader is out with an Achilles tendon injury, the Bearcats are healthy heading into the indoor season.

Healthiness, coupled with continued experience, may bring good potential in the Bearcats' coming year.

"If we stay healthy, we can build for the outdoor season, and we may break some records along the way," Lorek said. "I just want our team to be competitive every meet."

Both teams travel Friday to Lincoln for the Holiday Inn Invite.

Both squads tip off at Savannah tourney

By Sam Robinson
Chief Reporter

Both Maryville High School basketball teams are in the midst of a busy week as the Savannah tournament tipped off Monday night.

While the young girls' squad stumbled out of the blocks Monday night in the form of a 52-34 loss to St. Joseph-Lebon, the boys took the court at 9 p.m. Tuesday as they and Savannah treated the tourney crowd to a thrilling overtime nightcap.

The Spoofhounds would ultimately come up short falling 56-53 to the Savages. The game featured the 'Hounds rallying back from a seemingly insurmountable 17-point deficit to force overtime.

Assistant coach Ryan Tool thought the team showed a lot of determination in coming back in the second half, but getting down early in overtime and having its leading scorer foul out soon after was too much to overcome.

"Andy Walter fouling out with two minutes remaining was a big loss offensively," Tool said. "We were trying to play catch-up and shifted into full court pressure and we just couldn't get that last basket we needed."

Walter's presence was missed as the junior scored 17 points prior to his exit in overtime. The 'Hounds came out firing early, notching a first quarter lead, but that quickly evaporated as the Savages defense took the 'Hounds out of their rhythm. Four three pointers from reserve Travis Partridge helped give Savannah a 12-point halftime lead.

Maryville's struggles continued as the Savannah lead ballooned up to 17 points in the third period before Walter and the 'Hounds stormed back.

Behind Walter's dribble drives and penetration leading to several successful free throw opportunities, the 'Hounds forced a 48-48 deadlock at regulation's end. Stephen Staashelm and John Hart, who scored 10 and 12 respectively, also helped Maryville close the gap.

"My shots weren't falling from three so I ended up shooting all from the inside after that," Walter said. "I got fouled a lot and took what they gave me. We fought back in the second half but we just couldn't quite finish it."

Savannah outscored the Walter-less Maryville squad 8-5 in overtime. The loss dropped the 'Hounds to 5-5 on the season.

Over the holiday break the team traveled to Liberty, Mo., for the William Jewell tournament.

Maryville was matched against bigger schools in Truman and St. Pius X. Bigger being the key word against Truman as Maryville faced 6-foot-10 center Steve Moore who scored 19 points and brought down 13 rebounds. The 'Hounds fell behind 28-14 at the half and despite a 21-point third quarter, lost 63-43. The following day brought Truman City's St. Pius X. The 'Hounds played the Warriors within nine in the first half but ultimately fell 64-42. Walter led all scorers in the game with 17.

Maryville plays their second tournament game today against the Winnetonka JV team at 4:30 p.m.

On the girls' side, the woes continued as they opened the tournament with a 52-34 loss to St. Joseph-LeBlond Monday night.

For the majority of the first half, the 'Hounds kept pace with the Eagles with the score as close as 16-14 at one point. But the constant pressure applied by LeBlond throughout the second period forced many Maryville turnovers leading to a 19-8 run to close out the first half.

The second half saw an improvement on defense but by then the deficit was too much to overcome.

"We played OK for three quarters but really struggled in the second," coach Grant Hageman said. "They pressured us on defense and we had a hard time getting into our offense. We just couldn't rebound from the it."

The loss marked the second of the season to the Eagles and dropped 'Hounds to 2-10 on the year.

Over the holiday break Maryville fared slightly better with the team going 1-4 over the three-week span.

The 'Hounds were plagued by turnovers and sub-par shooting at the LeBlond tournament in December, Hageman said. Maryville fell to East Buchannan in the first round 49-39 and narrowly lost to Falls City (Neb.) the next night. The team opened 2007 with a 58-29 loss to conference foe Lafayette last Thursday.

Their lone win over the break came over Clarinda (Iowa) on Saturday in nail-biting fashion. With under a minute remaining, junior Leah Wilmes sank one of two free throws to break the tie and give Maryville a 46-45 advantage that they would preserve to notch their second win of the season.

Hageman is seeing improvement from his team especially on the defensive side during a difficult portion of their season.

"We're trying to get better every single day," Hageman said. "With three games in four days, this is the tough part of our schedule. We're a better defensive team now than we were in November and we still got half the season left and we want to be playing our best ball toward the end."

Warriors edge depleted 'Hounds

By Sam Robinson
Chief Reporter

With two wrestlers from the starting lineup sustaining injuries Saturday in Harrisonville, the Maryville High School wrestling team faced a challenge in Chillicothe.

The Spoofhounds ended up falling to the Hornets 46-36 Tuesday night and missed several opportunities along the way.

"It was a very winnable," coach Joe Drake said. "We just didn't take care of things when we needed to. We weren't aggressive in matches where we led. We wrestled too passive and kept getting caught making foolish mistakes."

Without 140-pound junior Dakota Merrill, who suffered an elbow injury at Saturday's meet, and 189-pound Luke Lancaster, who was out with a shoulder problem, other starters needed to rise to the occasion.

Two who did so were 171-pound senior Cliff Robertson, a 2006 state qualifier, and junior Tenner Archer. Robertson pinned his opponent to take the victory and Archer aggressively went after his man from the outset and pinned his opponent within two minutes.

Drake would like to see more focus and aggressiveness from his team in the near future.

"We'll need more energy, right now taking care of business as it comes along," Drake said. "We're worrying about who's not in the lineup and we're not overcoming the difficulties well."

The loss drops the 'Hounds' record to 1-3.

Over the holiday break, the team spent plenty of time on the mat. In addition to the Harrisonville tournament last Saturday, they faced Savannah on Dec. 20, and St. Joseph-Benton and Lafayette last week.

Against Savannah, Maryville lost

36-33, notching several individual victories in the close defeat. Robertson pinned his opponent in a lightning-quick six seconds, while Merrill and 215-pound Lancaster also won their matches. The next week Maryville lost 56-24 to what Drake considers a much-improved Benton team.

Two days later versus Lafayette, Maryville got its first victory of the season in convincing fashion, 50-30. The largest 'Hound, freshman Jason Davis, got the quickest victory of the meet in pinning his opponent in 37 seconds to improve his record to 12-1 on the season.

Davis attributes his early winning streak to an extensive wrestling background and good coaching at his new level of competition.

"I've been wrestling for nine years," Davis said. "My coaching has helped me, too, along with the kids I wrestle in practice. They help me out a lot."

At the Harrisonville tournament on Saturday, Maryville was one of only two class one teams at the 15-team meet dominated by class two and three schools. Yet in a gym filled with big schools and fast wrestlers, the 'Hound who shined brightest was one of the smallest ones in freshman Dannen Merrill. Merrill finished first in the 119-pound division by defeating his opponent in 3:44 to improve his record to 10-3. Robertson would finish second in his division as well.

Merrill believes the team is finding its stride as the season wears on.

"We were kind of slow at the start but we've picked it up and have been doing better and just listening to the coach," Merrill said. "Like against Lafayette it was really close in some of them (the matches) at the beginning, and then we just started pulling away."

Next up for the 'Hounds is the Plattsburg dual tournament Saturday.

Celebrate newest inductees

Looking down the list of names that made the Baseball Hall of Fame Tuesday, a trend can be seen.

The end of innocence. Cal Ripken, Jr. and Tony Gwynn finished with the third and seventh highest voting percentages of all time, when the biggest story was: Will Mark McGwire get in?

Brett Berger
University Sports Editor

Ripken and Gwynn are two of the last players in the "steroid age" that carried the game with grace and elegance. Both Ripken and Gwynn had 3,000 hits.

Ripken is more defined by his major-league record 2,632 consecutive games. Gwynn was known for having the purest swing and a National League eight batting titles and both were clean. Ripken's head didn't suddenly grow a full hat size and Gwynn ate a few hot dogs in his playing days.

Ripken's consecutive games streak was the last celebrated milestone that has no questions behind it. Gwynn had a chance to bat .400 during a strike-shortened 1994 season. These two players also stayed with one team—a fact that should be celebrated in a time where players leave a team before they get started.

In an ESPN.com article, Gwynn acknowledged that players knew of performing enhancing substances. "In the late 1980s and early '90s, we had no rules," Gwynn said. "We knew, players knew, owners knew, everybody knew and we didn't say anything about it."

Ripken expressed more regret for what baseball has endured in trying to clean up its image. "It saddens me that baseball had to go through this," Ripken said. McGwire has buried his chances

'Spice of life'

New intramural games offered

By Scott Levine
Asst. Sports Editor

The campus recreation staff is providing something different to Northwest students second trimester.

Along with traditional favorites, basketball and volleyball, three new sports have been added to the intramural list.

Ultimate Frisbee, previously an intramural activity, is making a comeback, while court soccer and tube water polo, are new to this trimester's line-up. Graduate Assistant Cody McDowell said that new sports give students variety.

"We like to rotate our activities," McDowell said. "We keep the main ones like basketball, volleyball and bowling, but depending on participation, we may try something different."

Introducing new sports. New sports are developed different ways. In one instance, the staff may discuss new possibilities. On the other hand, outside sources can introduce new ideas.

Recreation Sports Director Bob Lade said the staff tries to offer the best sports for students.

"Variety is the spice of life," Lade said. "We try to switch some sports from one year to the next."

"We get these ideas a number of ways, but one way to find new sports is at the national convention."

Court soccer was one of those new sports introduced to Lade at the national convention. This new activity is a form of indoor soccer, so Lade and McDowell said this should give people what they requested.

"This really fit into our facility schedule," Lade said. "A number of people have requested indoor soccer and this is the best way to play for our facility."

This form of indoor soccer is played on the racquetball courts. McDowell said the rules are the same as racquetball, except players kick a soccer ball, as opposed to using a racket.

Court soccer starts in March, while ultimate Frisbee makes its comeback in April. Tube water polo, played like water polo except your body is in a tube, begins in April.

No matter what sports are being added, students flock to basketball and volleyball during second trimester. McDowell said these are the most popular sports and they gain attention from fraternities and sororities.

Derek Smith, a member of the TKF fraternity, said intramurals play a big role in fraternities.

"If we know about intramurals, then we most likely will join," Smith said. "We like participating and we're pretty open to any sport."

The larger sports are split into four divisions of fraternities, sororities, men and women. Smaller sports are divided into two groups and water polo is one.

Despite basketball and volleyball's popularity, second trimester's numbers do not exceed first trimester's participation.

The fall season totaled 1,974 students last year, while second trimester tallied 1,830. McDowell said this happens because the popular fall sports, football and softball, require more players.

"We get really good numbers for basketball and volleyball, but they don't have as many people," McDowell said. "But the spring does offer another popular activity in bowling. That gets good participation from the frats and sororities."

The intramural season opens Tuesday, and with 11 sports offered, there shouldn't be much trouble finding a likeable sport.

For more information on intramurals, visit Northwest's Web site and click on athletics, or visit the Student Recreation Center.

POISED: After year off Brue leads team on and off the court

A turn for the worse

The end of her freshman year didn't go as well as it started.

Brue went from starting to hardly playing, which took a toll on the player's spirits. She would rather have been playing.

"It was really—not miserable, but it wasn't very much fun," Brue said. "I learned a lot my freshman year, just about everything in general."

Her sophomore year started much like the previous one ended. After trying to play through the pain in her back, Brue was forced to take a medical redshirt for the year. Steinmeyer said it was probably the best that ever happened, although for her it was miserable.

"It was really hard, really hard," Brue said. "I hate watching a game and not being able to play. It kills me. It makes me cry. If I sit there and don't play I get tears in my eyes. I hate it. It was really hard. I didn't enjoy it at all."

Doctors never figured out for sure what happened to the player's back. The cushioning between disks in her spine wasn't right, and it is assumed a sack of fluid may have burst, causing Brue to barely be able to walk or sleep.

After much rehabilitation in the Northwest fitness center, as well as with doctors in her hometown, Brue said the pain now only returns after numerous days of tough practices in a row.

Starting anew

This season started a little rough for the returning sophomore. Brue didn't start at the beginning of the season. That is no longer the case.

"When she got healed she played with the team last summer," Steinmeyer said. "She's a good player, we recognized that from the start. But you know, whenever you sit out for a full year, you're going to be rusty, and Meghan was rusty."

But she's not rusty anymore. She's that kind of player. She's the type of player who can carry us."

Brue is now one of the starting five and leads the team in field goal percentage (.467), points scored (178) and average points per game (13.7).

"Last year, sitting out all year, it just made me want it a lot more than I did after my freshman year," Brue said. "...I still had the desire to play, but it was just a little bit harder since

NORTHWEST GUARD Meghan Brue gets past William Penn University defenders prior to conference play.

I didn't get to play that much.

Then I had to sit out a year and it just made me miss it, it made me miss playing in games and stuff, and realizing that all the preseason, all the postseason and all the practice that goes with it are for the games. I really enjoy games, so it definitely motivated me."

Steinmeyer and Brue aren't the only people happy to have her back on the court. Point guard Kelli Nelson said her teammate not only helps her out with guard duties, but also knows how to play no matter where she is on the court.

She notes Brue's ability to drive the lane, cause players to foul her and helping at the post on defense as a few things she can accomplish on the court.

"A lot of the younger girls, and us (upperclassmen) even, are trying to do some of the things she does to help our game," Nelson said.

Steinmeyer wants Brue's overall attitude to spread over to the rest of his team.

He said her ability to not get into mind games and not worrying about the petty things are some of her greatest assets, as well as just having fun on the court. "She says the right things, she does the right things, and I think she truly means it," Steinmeyer said. "It's not just player talk to coach talk. She really knows what's important to basketball, she knows how to take advantage of her strengths and hide her weaknesses."

Even with all her talent, Brue thinks only as a team. She has only one goal, and that is to win. "I just want to be good, I want our team to be good," Brue said. "That's the most important thing. That's all I really care about; I just want us to win. It's not fun to lose at all."

Today's Birthday (01-11-07)

Make old business you top priority this year. Clean out your closets, too, and your garage, and the attic. You'll discover treasures.

To get the advantage, check the day's rating: 10 is the easiest day, 0 the most challenging.

Aries (March 21-April 19)

Today is a 6 — It's unlikely you'll get everything you want if you go after it all by yourself. So relax, and let somebody else go and get it for you.

Taurus (April 20-May 20)

Today is an 8 — Proceed to take care of whatever issues you've been contemplating. Move quickly now, while the time is right. Put your plan into action.

Gemini (May 21-June 21)

Today is a 7 — You're lucky, especially if you're working with a good adviser. Don't even try to come up with all the answers on your own.

Cancer (June 22-July 22)

Today is a 5 — Matters seem to be going well, all things considered. Continue to fix up your own place before taking on new projects.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22)

Today is a 7 — Your luck improves dramatically as you improve your own skills. Winning in just about everything gets a lot easier, too.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

Today is an 8 — Shopping should go well, especially for household items. You could find an excellent deal in real estate too, if you want some.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

Today is a 7 — The subject that was confusing so very long ago is beginning to seem very easy. It's amazing how that happens.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

Today is an 8 — You're still gaining money without doing any more work. Obviously, you have a system figured out that works for you.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

Today is a 7 — Your honesty is appreciated now. As you well know, that isn't always the case. So educate them clearly, simply and with confidence.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Today is an 8 — You'll be asked to reveal some things you've kept private, to advance your career. The higher you go, the more transparent you'll have to become, so keep it clean.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

Today is a 6 — You need to hang out for a while with people who will renew your sense of humor. You need psychic rejuvenation. Do something downright goofy.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20)

Today is a 7 — You have hidden resources you may have forgotten about. Some of them may be stuff that's greatly increased in value. Find out how much you really have.

Your Man hates living in dorms

When I first saw the brochures advertising Northwest, I thought, "Wow those people look so happy. Living on campus should be swell. It'll be a chance to meet a lot of new and interesting people."

If I had picked Mason Dixon to beat Rocky in Rocky 999, or whichever even number we're on, I wouldn't have been more wrong.

Living in the dorms is a lot like being in prison. I mean that. Not just because both places are awful and smell and are neglected, but because they are strikingly similar. Let us examine.

1) Roommates. In prison they call them cellmates, but it's all semantics right? In prison your cellmate is likely to be some drugged-out psychopath. In college it's the same thing, but he/she probably won't try to rape you. On the flip side, your cellmate won't steal your stuff because you won't have anything to steal.

The Stroller

2) Nothing but rules. No drinking. No smoking. No fornicating. Well that last one's not a rule but who wants to do it while your roommate watches and belts out a cover of Dancing Queen by Abba or Funky Cold Medina by Tone Loc. I don't. Nor do I want to pay $1,700 a semester to have some narc RA tell me I'm wrong for "accidentally" peeing on the couch in the lounge. "It wasn't my fault! Aaron that couch was giving me lip." In prison it's the same thing, but at least in there you get to smoke.

3) Lack of privacy. I don't know about you guys, but sharing a bathroom with 50 people who may or may not have the Bearcat clap doesn't get me excited to drop trou and bow. Showering is a whole other issue. In prison shower time is like recess and tell, which is a problem, when, like me, your "show and tell" is not worth showing or telling.

$500 a month. That's how much it costs to live in the dorms. That seems a little steep for sexual abstinence and a Russian roulette's chance at the Bearcat Clap. So I have a solution for all you cash strapped co-eds. Crime. Just commit a crime. You'll live rent-free for five-10 years. As an added bonus you get a free meal plan. Plus, the chance to meet new and interesting people just like at Northwest.

Only, in prison I'd rethink bringing a date back to your place.

Resolve to resolve in

Plopped on a stool all day with waves of Domino's heavy in the air, makes squeezing into that desired bikini for a spring cruise tough.

Beth Sandau and Tiffany Scott, employees at The Sport Shop, neighbors to Domino's in Maryville, are teaming up to rid the extra padding they packed on during the holidays through their new years resolutions.

"Being in college you gain a lot of weight and I didn't want to be the typical student," Sandau said.

Once the clock strikes midnight and the final scrap of confetti flutters to the floor, many people vow to make changes in the new year.

Despite past failures, people remain determined to follow through with resolutions this year by setting goals for motivation.

"Usually I'm saying a resolution with no intentions to do it, but this year is going to be different," said Lindsay Kenny owner and head floral designer at Bittersweet Floral and Gifts.

Kenny wants to kick her smoking habit. Additionally, with the help of her cousin, she wants to shed a few pounds. To do so, the duo joined the Maryville

Community Center's New Year's Challenge 2007.

The challenge is one of many businesses' attempts to follow the trend of health and wellness resolutions the new year promises.

Participants are divided into teams and weighed in to compete in the challenge of most overall weight loss and increased activity. Winners could receive gift cards, iPods and clothing.

"With a partner, people have someone to come workout with and they know they have to back it (the resolution) up," said community center receptionist Becci Schimming.

Hy-Vee noticed an increase in sales of low-fat foods and diet books and sent out a publication including exercise and healthy suggestions on better eating, said Greg Chapman, store director.

"People eat better to hold on to that for as long as they can and we develop a healthier attitude," Chapman said.

Although diet and exercise are common physical resolutions, people are trying out attitude changes too.

Amber Cook of Cook's Computer strives to stay positive about daily life and encourages others to not give up on they want.

"(My resolution is to) be happy and live each day to the fullest," Cook said.

"You only live once...be happy and keep smiling."

Ken Carmichael of Carson's Sports Grille wants to continue building success within his restaurant but feels empty resolutions are pointless.

"If a resolution is important enough you will keep it and to set one just for setting one is wasted effort," Carmichael said, "Do what you say you're going to do and keep your mouth shut if you don't intend to keep it."

To avoid unfulfilled resolutions, CNN.com recommends a strategy of preparation, planning and confidence.

Set attainable goals by making them simple. Instead of striving to exercise every day, make a goal of exercising two to three days a week to be more successful.

Reward yourself for avoiding temptation. Spend the extra money saved from not smoking to buy something you couldn't afford before.

Keep a diary or journal to record the resolution process to notice the positive steps over time.

A week after making new year changes, Maryville residents are staying strong in their fight against temptations and bad habits.

"Stay committed. Make a goal and go for it," Sandau said. "It's all on you."

5 easy steps to a New Year's Resolution

STEP 1: Be realistic by setting achievable goals. Winning the lottery, for example, is out of your grasp.

STEP 2: Describe your resolutions in specific terms. Instead of "I don't want to be lazy," opt for "I want to exercise regularly" or "I will cut down on my television watching."

STEP 3: Break down large goals into smaller ones. For instance, commit to losing weight by resolving to join a gym and improve your eating habits.

STEP 4: Find alternatives to a behavior that you want to change, and make this part of your resolution plan. So you want to quit smoking but you smoked to relax yourself? What other forms of relaxation are available to you?

STEP 5: Above all, aim for things that are truly important to you, not what you think you ought to do or what others expect of you.
